Schema Markup Report

Spiritual Tattoo Art Studio · spiritualart3.com · 31 October 2026

Summary

Every page on the site, in English and French, now tells search engines in machine-readable form who the studio is, where it is, when it is open, who the artist is, what it offers and how each page fits into the site. This is done with schema.org structured data in JSON-LD: a script tag that visitors never see but that Google, Bing and AI search tools read when they crawl a page.

Business details were taken from the current live site (spiritualart3.com) and merged with the details already in the new Next.js site. The production build passes, and every JSON-LD block on the built pages was checked to make sure it parses correctly.

How the markup is organised

Instead of repeating the studio's details on every page, the markup is built as one connected graph. Three core entities are defined once, each with a permanent ID, and every page points to them by that ID. That way search engines treat the studio, its website and its artist as one consistent entity across every URL.

Entity	ID	What it describes
TattooParlor + HealthAndBeautyBusiness	`spiritualart3.com/#studio`	The studio: name, address, phone, email, hours, map, Instagram, services, areas served.
WebSite	`spiritualart3.com/#website`	The website itself, its languages (en-IN, fr), and that the studio publishes it.
Person	`spiritualart3.com/#mukhilan`	Mukhilan, founder and master tattoo artist, and that he works for the studio.

Each page then adds its own node (WebPage, AboutPage, ContactPage or CollectionPage), linked to the WebSite with isPartOf and to the studio with about. Most pages also get a breadcrumb trail.

Code changes

File	Change
`app/lib/site.ts`	Real email, Instagram and Maps link added to the single source of truth. New siteJsonLd() builds the studio, website and founder graph. New webPageJsonLd() builds page and breadcrumb nodes.
`app/[lang]/layout.tsx`	Emits the localized site-wide graph on every page
`app/[lang]/contact/page.tsx`	ContactPage + breadcrumb; the Instagram link now goes to the real profile
`app/[lang]/services/page.tsx`	Linked CollectionPage, BreadcrumbList and ItemList by ID
`app/[lang]/tattoo-shop-near/[area]/page.tsx`	isPartOf
`app/components/studio-experience.tsx` `app/components/studio-film-gallery.tsx`	Hard-coded mailto links switched to spiritualart3@gmail.com

- Review / AggregateRating stars. Google ignores review markup a business adds about itself on its own site (so-called self-serving reviews), so the eight Google reviews on the home page were not marked up. Stars in search come from the Google Business Profile.
- “15+ years experience” (live site) conflicts with “tattooing since 2018” (new site copy). The markup follows the new site's visible copy (foundingDate 2018), because markup has to match what's on the page. Please confirm with the owner.
- priceRange, paymentAccepted, ratings: not published anywhere, so not invented.
- Calendly booking link: still a placeholder on the contact page, so it was not used as a booking action.

Next steps

- Deploy, then test a few URLs (home, /contact, a service page, an area page) in Google's Rich Results Test (search.google.com/test/rich-results) and validator.schema.org.
- In Google Search Console, watch the Enhancements reports (Breadcrumbs, FAQ) for errors.
- Make sure the Google Business Profile uses exactly the same name, address, phone and hours. Matching details across the web are a strong local-ranking signal.
- Confirm the years-of-experience wording and the real Calendly link with the owner.
